At one end, hard by the shed where the Lanes' hunter Red Clown is stabled, is his workshop. At the other end is the 32-by-24-foot living room, with eight open beams revealing an area "first," a pre-finished celotex roof.

MAKING a gilded frame begins with wood strips joined by Lane on miter vise, top left, using nails and hot rabbit-skin glue. After three coats of gesso and three of bole have smoothed wood surface, Lane puts thin gold leaf squares on a cushion of pony hide and cuts them (top center) to size. Never touching the leaf by 75-00001R000300420003 fashion to the moistened frame (top right) held by static electricity on a special brush called a gilder's tip.
